

Federica Lattanzio

My name is Federica Lattanzio, and I am a PhD student in the 'Humanism and Technologies' course at the University of Macerata.

The focus of my studies is German language and translation, so I am a foreign language lover. I like reading books, doing sports, and walking in nature very much. I also enjoy volunteering in associations where I can share my skills and knowledge with other people.

As a former Erasmus student, I know the importance of agreements between universities that make student exchange possible. I realised how a strong relationship between universities can be crucial for a prosperous student exchange and the successful education of those involved.

Therefore, I decided to become a Student Ambassador because I want to contribute to strengthening the existing relationship in ERUA and the experience exchange for the benefit of this community.
