I'm Fakhar, a Cultural and Social Studies student at the European University Viadrina. As a wheelchair user, accessibility is central to everything I do. I'm passionate about adaptive sports (especially wheelchair basketball), digital accessibility, and intercultural exchange. I also enjoy volunteering and have participated in initiatives through vostel.de, Serve the City Berlin, and the Freiwilligenzentrum Frankfurt (Oder) in collaboration with Caritas. I'm a member of the Allgemeiner Behindertenverband in Deutschland (ABiD), where I work to promote the rights and self-determination of people with disabilities. I participated in the Young Forum for Action on Sustainability and Climate Change, where collaborating with students across the alliance showed me how intercultural exchange fosters innovative solutions. This experience reinforced my conviction that true sustainability includes social sustainability, ensuring no one is left behind. Becoming an ERUA ambassador extends my work as a peer tutor at Viadrina's Center for Teaching and Learning, where I support students with e-learning and lead disability awareness initiatives. ERUA's commitment to humanistic, inclusive education deeply resonates with me. I'm driven by transformation, students gaining confidence in digital spaces, and intercultural barriers dissolving during sessions. Having experienced both challenges and the strength of supportive communities, I'm inspired by ERUA's vision of an environment where every student can thrive. I aim to build bridges across cultures, disciplines, and ability levels, creating lasting connections throughout our alliance.
