

Honorata Drabik

My name is Honorata and on a daily basis I am a Psychology student with a strong interest in neurocognitive science and reportage literature. I'm especially fascinated by how culture shapes the way we think, feel, and perceive the world - an interest that connects my passion for psychology, non-fiction writing, and travel. I love discovering cities without a set plan, simply walking and observing, which allows me to experience different perspectives in a natural and unfiltered way. Becoming an ERUA Ambassador felt like a perfect opportunity to bring these passions together - promoting cross-cultural dialogue, curiosity, and academic exchange. What motivates me in this role is the chance to support open-minded exploration and connect with people through shared stories and experiences.
