

Lydia Dimitreli, University of the Aegean,
Oceanography and Marine biosciences.

I haven't participated in any ERUA events or activities so far, but I am genuinely interested in being actively involved in the network. I see this as a great opportunity to connect with students from different universities, exchange ideas, and contribute to a more open and creative academic environment.

I enjoy creative writing, learning about different cultures, and engaging in meaningful conversations. I'm passionate about sustainability and community-driven initiatives, and I always look for new ways to grow personally and academically. I also love working with people, both in person and online, and I find collaboration to be one of the most inspiring aspects of any experience.

I became an ERUA ambassador because I truly believe in the power of collaboration and student voices in shaping the future of education. Working in diverse teams has always been something I enjoy, and I'm inspired by environments where people come together to exchange perspectives, solve problems, and create change. ERUA's values openness, inclusion, and innovation resonate deeply with me, and I'm excited to contribute to this European community by helping build strong connections across universities.
