ERUA Student Ambassador

Field of Studies : International Finance and Economics

Hobbies and interests:

Traveling: Exploring new places and cultures to broaden my global perspective

Cooking: Experimenting in the kitchen with dishes from different countries

Personal Development: Mentoring others, exchanging ideas, and encouraging personal and academic growth

Languages: Currently learning Italian and always eager to engage across languages and cultures

These hobbies are not only a source of joy—they also continuously challenge me and help me understand people better.

Motivation to become an ambassador for ERUA:

I originally come from Mashhad, Iran, and got a Master degree in Industrial Engineer with over Nine years of experience in the automotive and electronics sectors. My academic path bridges the worlds of engineering, finance, and strategic innovation.

Joining the European Reform University Alliance (ERUA) as a Student Ambassador was a deeply intentional step. I am passionate about creating meaningful connections across borders and cultures, and ERUA's mission of collaboration and co-creation within European higher education aligns perfectly with my values.

I became a Student Ambassador for ERUA to engage more deeply with a diverse and forward-thinking academic community across Europe. I believe education should be a space for exchange, openness, and innovation.

ERUA embodies these values by creating platforms for students to connect beyond borders, disciplines, and cultures.

What inspires me is the transformative potential of international collaboration. With a professional background in engineering and now studying finance, I see the value of interdisciplinary learning and the power of dialogue across fields. I am also passionate about creating inclusive spaces where students from all walks of life can thrive, contribute, and grow.
